The Temple Church organ is a majestic instrument with nearly 3,500 wooden and metal pipes, ranging in length from 32-ft to just a few inches. Over 50 years since its installation, the Temple Church organ now needs a once-in-a-generation overhaul. All of the organ's thousands of intricate parts have to be checked and repaired or renewed. Work starts in 2011; at Easter 2013 the organ will be back in action, with the sound restored to all its original glory. We are energetically raising the funds we need for this major work.
