Public Discussion, Monday 30 October, 6.00pm

To celebrate the 800th Anniversary of the Charter of the Forest, 6 November 1217

Prof. Sir John Baker, QC, FBA,
Legal historian.

Stephen Hockman, QC,
6 Pump Court, former Treasurer of Middle Temple

Prof. Stephen Toope, OC,
Vice-Chancellor of the University of Cambridge

Prof. Geraldine van Bueren, QC,
Professor of International Human Rights Law at Queen
Mary University of London

By 1217 the King's Forest had absorbed one-third of the realm. The Forest was subject to the King's personal rule and justice, and all economic activity within it was subject to taxation or penalties. In 1217 the clauses in Magna Carta restraining the King's claims to Forest-land and its control were extracted, strengthened and issued as a separate Charter of the Forest. This promised a vast programme of 'disafforestation', returning land to commoners' use without fees to the King.

'When the Barons insisted on confirming rights that would benefit all of the people in the 13th c., they set society on a path for ensuring public rights generally. Parliament's later mandate to represent the people is forecast in chapters of the Forest Charter privileging commoners. When the Forest Charter established liberties of the forest for all, rights that sustain their economic and social lives, the Charter also anticipated what today is expressed in human rights instruments.' - N.A.Robinson, Magna Carta and the Rule of Law, ABA, 2015.

The Charter was issued under the seal of William Marshal, hero of Magna Carta and Regent to the boy-king Henry III; in 1219 William was buried in the Temple Church where his effigy still lies.
